Thursday, September 9th

Today we began by designing the basic layout of our website and planned what pages we would include, and settled on

1. Home Page
2. four Artist pages
3. About Us page
4. FAQ page
5. Contact Us page

We created a rough sketch of said pages using an iPad and exported the document as a PDF, then started working on the HTML files with said PDF as a base.

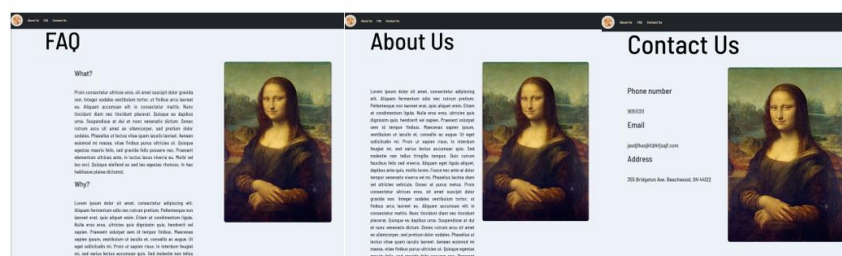

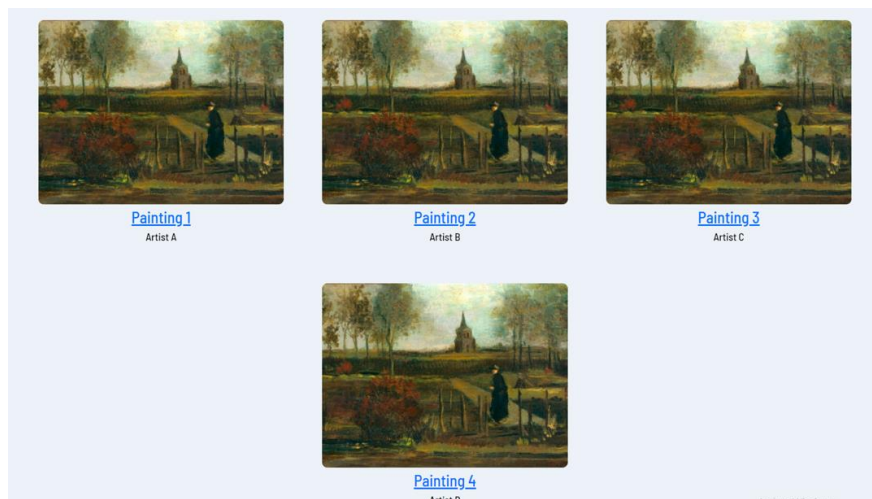

First, we began work on the Home Page, and decided that the large image at the top would be a carousel, so we used Bootstrap for that, as well as the Navigation Bar we also decided to add at the top of every page with Home, FAQ, Contact and About us buttons for easy navigation.

Friday, September 10th

Today we set up our Git repository in order to work in parallel more easily. We set up branches for each of the team members plus a Develop branch. This significantly sped up our workflow since we do not need to keep sending each other files in order to modify them.

We began working on the basic HTML structure of all secondary pages (i.e. Contact, FAQ, About Us and a single painting page) and then added the previously created navigation bar to all of them. We also added the necessary hyperlinks to the Home Page to properly access all other pages.

Saturday, September 11th

Today we started working on making sure that the website is properly displayed on mobile devices and adjusted the position of some of the text in the secondary pages.

We also added a bottom bar with links to popular social media sites.

Most of today was spent fixing bugs with the placement of images and positioning of text, as well as adjusting the aspect ratios and resolutions of the images that we will display in carousels.

Sunday, September 12th

Finally, on Sunday we began replacing the example photo of the index.html to different paintings of the chosen artists, such as Vermeer, Rembrandt, Matisse and Renoir.

Next, we gathered brief data about the artists and their paintings and added it to their respective pages.

Then, we changed the example text and image on paint1.html and put the main page of an artist, which includes a brief biography, the years of living and three paintings produced by the same artist. We created four in total, with changes in the information and the pictures on each site.

Later on, we created the bid site to register the bid proposals of each painting, we fixed the navbar in both top and bottom on all sites and, last but not least, we finished all the webpage today. Here is a series of images of how the website looks.
